Judy A. Rose, Dawn Sonntag, Greg A Steinke, at large
Tomas Svoboda, Honorary Member

Cascadia Composers is a chapter of the National Association of Composers/USA (NACUSA) NACUSA is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization. Founded by Henry Hadley in 1933, it is one of the oldest organizations devoted to the promotion and performance of American concert hall music. Many of America’s most distinguished composers have been among its members.

These concerts and presentations are made possible by dues from NACUSA (National Association of Composers/USA), other grants and donors, and fundraisers sponsored by Cascadia. Special thanks to our media sponsor, Oregon ArtsWatch. Cascadia Composers receives support from the Oregon Arts Commission, a state agency funded by the State of Oregon and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Program Notes

ADAGIETTO DOLOROSO: in memoriam Frederic Rzewski

by Gary Lloyd Noland

I composed Adagietto Doloroso in memory of Frederic Rzewski, who left us last year on 26 June. I first became aware of Rzewski’s music shortly after moving from Berkeley to Boston in 1981. A composition instructor at the conservatory I attended first mentioned his name to me when he favorably compared some settings of Brecht I had written for soprano and piano to the maestro’s works. Quite naturally, such a comparison drew my curiosity, so I began looking into Rzewski’s music at the time. I finally got a chance to meet the maestro after attending a concert of his at Mills College in Oakland in 1992. (I actually attended a talk of his at Harvard several years prior thereto that almost ended in a fistfight, which was not an environment altogether conducive to reaching out to him at the time.) The most memorable thing I remember Rzewski saying at the restaurant in downtown Oakland, where we had dinner together after his concert, is something to the effect that he felt a strong need to consult a faith healer to cure him of his cynicism (!). Suffice it to say, he was one of the most powerful and influential musicians of his generation; the sense of loss is therefore deeply felt by many of us whose orbits he happened to cross.
CHIMNEYS
by Brian Field

Chimneys – presented here – is an excerpt from a longer cycle of songs for baritone with a piano accompaniment with texts from the E.E. Cummings’ collection Tulips and Chimneys. Cummings’ bleak poetry is set in a through-composed manner with every verse getting an original treatment revealing the poet’s original train of thought.

i. when you rang at Dick Mid's Place

when you rang at Dick Mid's Place the madam was a bulb stuck in the door.
a fang of wincing gas showed how hair, in two fists of shrill colour, clutched the dull volume of her tumbling face scribbled with a big grin. her sow-eyes clicking mischief from thick lids.
the chunklike nose on which always the four tables of perspiration erectly sitting.
—If they knew you at Dick Mid's the three trickling chins began to traipse into the cheeks “eet smeestaire steevensun kum een, dare ease Bet, an Lee lee, an dee beeg wun” her handless wrists did gooey severe shapes.

ii. goodbye Betty,don’t remember me

goodby Betty,don’t remember me pencil your eyes dear and have a good time with the tall tight boys at Tabari’
s,keep your teeth snowy, stick to beer and lime, wear dark,and where your meeting breasts are round have roses darling,it’s all i ask of you—but that when light fails and this sweet profound Paris moves with lovers,two and two bound for themselves,when passionately dusk brings softly down the perfume of the world (and just as smaller stars begin to husk heaven)you,you exactly paled and curled with mystic lips take twilight where i know:
proving to Death that Love is so and so.

iii. when thou hast taken thy last applause when thou hast taken thy last applause,and when the final curtain strikes the world away, leaving to shadowy silence and dismay that stage which shall not know thy smile again, lingering a little while i see thee then ponder the tinsel part they let thee play;

write us a black girl poem
by Bella (Hall) and Theresa Koon

Several years ago, Portland actor and poet Eric Hull invited me to join a spoken voice ensemble he was founding called VOX. Eric would arrange poems from many different periods of English Literature, layering the voices, using repetition of phrases, words and even single letters to create choral works for speaking voices—reminiscent of Greek choruses. Our small ensemble would rehearse the pieces for weeks, refining aspects of inflection, dynamics, tempo, rhythm and diction—in preparation for public concerts. The process was rich, varied, demanding and—for us—unforgettable.

In contemplating Bella’s “Write Us a Black Girl Poem”, I was inspired to combine Eric’s approach with a bit of music. To do this, I needed to try to put myself in Bella’s shoes, and listen. She told me about the experience that lay at the heart of her poem, and also about her dreams for the future of her work. My intention was to employ a group of voices to magnify her message so that people from differing backgrounds might potentially receive its impact more deeply. This process gave me the honor of engaging with seven inspiring human beings. Thank you for listening.

Write Us A Black Girl Poem

When a black girl cries.
And everyone’s around to hear it.
Does she make a sound?
Or is it drowned out by shame?
Of how strong she was supposed to be?
Seeing how many stabs to the back she can take before she falls into a corpse resurrects herself only so they can do it all again and tell their friends they’ve witnessed black girl magic.
Or does she have to remind you she’s black in every poem she writes for you to remember you killed her?
Or does the poem have to end in triumph for you to consider it black enough and woman enough to make sense?
Show you what a fighter she is.
So strong.
So black.
So woman.
Or is depression not black enough to be her issue.
Only being black can be her issue.
Because her being black has everything to do with your place, your status, your privilege to watch what you’ve done to her from the audience.
Then give her a ten for a job well done.
So they tell her to write a poem.
So she writes one about how one time she drove 80 miles per hour headed towards the edge of a mountain and didn’t want to stop.
And they tell her that it is okay.
But this poem is for black lives.
So tell us your struggles as a black woman.
And she can tell them she is.
But they’ll say there’s not enough blood on the page for proof.
Tell us how we’ve choked your works into silence.
Tell us how we’ve made you bleed.
Tell us how black you are by telling us how many times we’ve put you 6 feet under the ground.
Tell us how many times you’ve screamed.
And everyone was around to hear it.
But no one could recall the sound.
Must’ve been angry.
Must’ve been black.
Must’ve been woman.
Must’ve been you.
Must’ve been silenced by us.
But please remind us how we did it.
We wanna keep knowing how we did it.
How we turned your experience into our entertainment.
And fooled you into thinking we actually cared.
Your poem about your anxiety was okay.
But we wanna hear how you haven’t been able to find a black therapist in this town to relate to you.
Tell us how a part of your experience we are.
You oppressed
You black
You woman
Tell us your worth.
Write us a black girl poem.
Make us feel what it’s like to wear your skin that’s always in the palm of our hands.
Back of our pockets.
Always handy to present when the timing’s right.
When we take your breath away.
So return the favor and remind us how that felt by taking away ours.
You token.
You black.
You woman.
So c’mon write us a black girl poem.
The one that shows us all the results of what we’ve done.

— Bella
A PRAYER FOR THOSE WHO LOOK AWAY
by Noam Faingold

A Prayer for Those Who Look Away for cello and fixed media was written with the Yom Kippur, Selichot, and related atonement services in mind. The work was written engaging with political speech whose context and structure can be critiqued through musical means. My goal is to make perceivable the tensions that lie hidden until musical contextualization intervenes. This work was informed by the separation of families and detention and abuse of vulnerable migrants at the border. I felt a personal resonance with this issue as a Hispanic Jewish person whose family had been treated in adjacent ways during Argentina's Dirty War and at various other points in the 20th century. My template for exploring musical narratives and forms arises from combining elements found in phenomenological texts like Gaston Bachelard's The Poetics of Space, and composer Annea Lockwood's idea of the sound map. Bachelard's text uses familiar shapes and motions to explore imagination's reliance on familiar images as a means to understand ourselves. Lockwood's maps record the sound profile of a geographic locale, such as a river, creating an aural impression of it. My sound maps account for shapes, gestures, and ideas in a philosophical/emotional space or inner world.

WindRiders
by I'lan S. Cotton

Modes continue to excite my ears – and as with the Indian raga system, and our own ancient church modes – I find that each change in scale degree quality changes the expressive nature of the mode itself. The mode in WindRiders is a variant on another I have used several times, and consists of: m2, m3, M3/d4, P5, M6, m7. The opening few measures introduce the melodic motion of this mode for this piece, similar to the alap of a classical Indian composition. What follows is the main composition, which is western in its construction, with themes and sections mirroring the imagery of soaring birds – Dancing with air, Soaring, Cruising the contours.

LIVE WIRE FIREFLIES
by Nicholas Yandell

This is the second of a set of three pieces I wrote for this instrumentation, begun in 2009, when I first moved to Oregon. Based on the mood and aesthetics I felt from experiencing Portland as a transplant, I first introduced in these pieces many of the characteristics that I’ve developed throughout much of the music I’ve written since. I notated voicemails of my friends (thanks Alex F. and Nick G.) and plugged in the rhythm and pitch directions of those messages into my melodic material. The use of spare textures, stark harmonies, sudden dynamic assaults, jagged rhythms, rock music influence and whimsical color choices, also give these pieces a special place in my catalog. They were also the first time I connected my compositions with companion poems including the following text for this piece:

After the dayglow disappears,
The city lights dance,
Like live wire fireflies,
Strewn across the firmament,
Carelessly singeing,
The crepuscular canvas,
Painting gleaming epitaphs,
Of the foregoing span.
TREES DREAMING
by Daniel Brugh

Two things inspired this piece. The first was sounds from a flute, when Amelia Lukas was testing the acoustics of the outdoor venue for Cascadia Composers' concert last fall. The second is the book The Hidden Lives of Trees by Peter Wohlleben. The energetic flute solo is the centerpiece, and the fixed media is painted sound filling the spaces around the flute. The video images were created as I was working on the piece.

CRICKETS
by Lisa Neher

This piece explores themes of individuality and community, connection and anonymity, the beauty and hope of the music of the natural world—both animal and human. Danusha Laméris's exquisite, aching poetry inspired me to write melodic, lyrical lines in the resonant low and medium register of the voice. This is the range I associate with the gut, the enteric brain, where we feel life's big emotions. Contrasting sections set in a high register using lighter vocal colors evoke the sounds of crickets using vowels only. The concept of many voices combining to create music across wide distances is particularly poignant two years into a global pandemic, during which much of my music making, not to mention my socializing, was and continues to be remote.

Crickets

Who can say if they are one or many? They make a sudden voice lift from the dark, an orchestra
that trembles through the vines.

And then—as if drawn to a close by an unseen hand—it comes to a just as sudden end.

I don’t know whether to envy or pity them their merged sound.

A hundred unknown players in the moonlit grove.

I try to raise my one voice, say a thing so singular it holds.
To what end?

Wouldn’t I rather be the music that scores
the night?

Song that stirs the lovers, lulls the wakeful back to sleep?

Invisible,
and yet.

Though perhaps
I have it wrong:
Each cricket frets its legs into place.

While, from a distance, all our voices make one melodious common sound.

RAINBOW NATION
by Jennifer Wright

Filmed in early 2021 in the midst of the Covid pandemic, "Rainbow Nation" began with an impulse to create art in deep response to the moment, relinquishing control and preconceived notions in favor of being still and listening to allow truths to emerge. In need of a positive vision, I invited young friends and their families to paint a communal mural imagining their ideal future. What wonderful creatures, plants, objects, people, stories, and ideas would populate this perfect world? Two videographers roamed freely as we painted, moving intuitively between perspectives and the spontaneous, beautiful moments that arose. As I slowly sifted through the many hours of resulting material to discover the story embedded therein, a trinity of film, spoken text, and music emerged, each element growing in symbiotic relationship with the others.

The title is inspired by the words of Archbishop Desmond Tutu, South African bishop and anti-apartheid/human rights activist, and Nelson Mandela, South Africa’s first Black president, to describe their vision of a just, equitable, multicultural, and peaceful post-apartheid South Africa. “Rainbow Nation” is an intimate narrative about the means by which new generations may absorb and rise to the challenges left to them by previous generations and circumstance and leave the world better than they found it.
THEME and VARIATION for MOVEMENT
by Timothy Arliss O’Brien

Theme and Variation for Movement is a composition for violin, piano, and dancer written as a study of how to execute the theme and variation classically and flawlessly. Dipping, diving, and deriving from the theme, each variation takes the violin, piano, dancer, and audience on a wild ride across what the composer’s imagination can do with one simple theme.

I WANT EVERYTHING
by Brian Dang and Drew Swatosh

In a nonbinary/trans, utopic reimagining of the original myth, Icarus finds themselves entrapped in a never-ending maze played by the instrumentalists and an aleatoric chorus of unstable, disembodied voices. The maze beckons them to submit to the societal expectations of their body/gender or fall to their death in the same way we know the myth ends. Daedalus, shifting in and out of different roles they’ve played in Icarus’s life, pushes Icarus to take risks and figure out what they want for themselves. “I Want Everything” speaks to the emergence of one’s identity through taking agency within the face of fear. With acceptance and the willingness to take the leap of faith, Daedalus and Icarus build the wings together and Icarus flies up and away, claiming life and agency for their body/gender beyond the myth and beyond expectations.

It was important to us that the role of Icarus be accessible to anybody regardless of birth assigned gender. Icarus was composed and designed to be flexible about what octave it’s sung in, making it accessible to a wider variety of trans and/or nonbinary singers. Finally, in this queering of the myth, in which we insert our own agency as nonbinary artists over the music + myth, we made sure to subvert the idea that queerness results in tragedy and instead turn to utopia. In the end, we believe that we can have self-autonomy, the support of our family and friends, and continue to live life to the fullest.

I Want Everything (sung by Icarus)

Is mine.
Everything.
The sun
the heat on my skin
the light of its rays
is mine.
The moon that dances in step luminous and glowing and its power that manifests in waves
is mine.
The air that flows in and out of my lungs and through every living creature and tree
on Earth
is mine.
This sky
so open so edgeless it overwhelms the eye of every beholder. This sky that stretches
so tightly around our world it seeps into our dreams.
This sky
is mine.
And I do not need a string to find my way
And I will fly as high as I want
And I will scream and bellow in joy
And laugh and plant my future in the wind Mutable, changing
I need not know where I am going or fit into this or that If all this
is mine.
You think you know how this story ends You’ve seen the pictures of my body dipping into the violent ocean never to be seen again.
But this is not that it will never be that I will fall into joy
I will fall into life
And this gift of being alive
on Earth
in my very own body
is mine.

— Brian Dang

HOMAGE to bell hooks
by Paul Safar

I was very excited when the opportunity arose to collaborate with Krump dancer Snubb on a new work. When we were discussing what kind of piece I could write for him, given the intense times we are living in right now, Snubb suggested “let it be a roller coaster ride”. That permission allowed me to structure the work vacillating between a rhythmic and somewhat angular instrumental section and a calm and quiet vocal section. Sometime during the summer of 2020 I noticed a quote on a telephone pole very close to my house here in Eugene. It was bell hooks’ “when we drop fear...” I was so taken by it that I came home and wrote it down. I felt it appropriate to set that text here in this piece, hence the title.

“When we drop fear, we can draw nearer to people, we can draw nearer to the earth, we can draw nearer to all the heavenly creatures that surround us.” — bell hooks

Poet Biographies

Bella

Bella (Bella Hall) is a local spoken word artist, published author, and award winning performer. Over the years Bella has performed across the country and has been featured in zines, podcasts, and campaigns. Overall she hopes that her art reaches people and helps everyone feel a little less alone.

Brian Dang

Brian Dang (they/them) is a Vietnamese/Chinese playwright, poet, and teaching artist based in Seattle. They are a resident playwright at Parley and were a 2020-21 Hugo House Fellow. For Brian, writing is an act of envisioning an eventual communing, an opportunity to freeze time as we know it, and a reaching for joy. Their writing has been supported by 4Culture, Seattle Office of Arts and Culture, and workshoped with Seattle Opera, Pork Filled Productions, Mirror Stage, Karen’s Secret Army, Theatre Battery, and the Sewanee Writers’ Conference. They teach with Writers in the Schools & Arts Corps.

bell hooks

Writer, teacher, and cultural critic bell hooks was born Gloria Jean Watkins on September 25, 1952, in Hopkinsville, Kentucky, to a working-class family. Her father, Veodis Watkins, was a janitor for the local post office, and her mother, Rosa Bell Watkins, was a homemaker, raising Gloria and her six siblings.

Gloria Watkins attended racially-segregated public schools in Hopkinsville as a child. She performed poetry readings for her church community and was heavily influenced by her maternal great-grandmother, Bell Blair Hooks, who was known for her sharp opinions. As a writer, she chose the pseudonym bell hooks in tribute to her mother and great-grandmother. She decided not to capitalize her new name to place focus on her work rather than her name, on her ideas rather than her personality.

Her first published book was a collection of poetry, And There We Wept, in 1978. In 1981, she published Ain’t I a Woman: Black Women and Feminism, which was perhaps her most significant scholarly work. In this book, she centralized the intersection of race, sex, and class at the core of black women’s lives. She argued that each identity has the ability to produce and perpetuate systems of oppression and domination. The book established her as a formidable critic and intellectual and set out some of the central themes that characterized her later work.

A passionate scholar, hooks was among the leading public intellectuals of her generation. She published over forty books and scholarly articles, on topics such as masculinity and patriarchy, self-help and engaged pedagogy, feminist consciousness and community creation, and representation and politics.

Composer Biographies

Daniel Brugh

Daniel Brugh, Composer Visionary Colorful Daring Fantastical... Deemed Portland Classical Music’s Resident Misfit by Willamette Week, Daniel Brugh is one of Oregon’s most idiosyncratically fascinating composers. (Oregon ArtsWatch) Combining unbounded creativity, stage savvy and tech geekery with a childlike sense of playfulness (Willamette Week), Brugh writes music and curates performance experiences that are visionary, daring, unexpected and fantastical. His wide-ranging output spans from powerfully haunting [and] seductively shadowy fixed media music (Oregon ArtsWatch) to dazzling neo-Romantic choral and chamber music. Chosen as the Oregon Music Teachers Association’s Composer of the Year in 2010, Brugh has enjoyed performances of his music throughout the Pacific Northwest, and as part of the 29th Annual Contemporary Music Festival in Havana, Cuba. As the Vice President of Cascadia Composers, the National Association of Composers USA’s largest chapter, Brugh curates imaginative and offbeat concerts that bypass the obstacles of elite-ness and conventional thinking, [are] entertaining on all fronts,... [and offer] compelling moments of musical magic, exuding a spirit of fun and adventure. (Oregon ArtsWatch) A Portland native and graduate of the School of Music at the University of Oregon, Brugh also attended the music academy at Interlochen, Michigan. He offers piano and composition lessons through his private studio in SE Portland.

I’lana S. Cotton

Composer I’lana Cotton (www.notimemusic.com) has created works for a broad range of genres, from solo piano to small chamber groups to large choral and instrumental ensembles. She holds a Master of Arts degree in composition from the UCLA. A California resident for many years, she was active in multi-art collaborations and performance. Since moving to southern Oregon in 2003, she has written over 30 works for Rogue Valley ensembles, including four commissions for the Siskiyou Singers. The Rogue Valley Symphony commissioned Cantus, a large-scale work for orchestra, in honor of its 50th anniversary season, which was premiered in October, 2017.

Noam Faingold

Washington DC based composer/educator Noam Faingold’s music has been described as "...lyrical...", "...exhilarating...", and "...a tour-de-force of Jazz melded with Classical...", by sources as varied as The New York Times, The BBC, and Downbeat Magazine. Faingold is passionate about composing for traditional instruments and multi-disciplinary and cross-genre projects. Highlights include works for cellist Inbal Segev and New York Philharmonic oboist Rob Botti, collaborating with 20th century poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko’s family on an orchestral elegy in his memory (Janáček Philharmonic Orchestra, Navona Records), and composing one of the first original virtual orchestra pieces collaborating with the George Kaiser Family Foundation and the Tulsa Symphony. As an educator, Faingold is excited about providing composition mentorship and generating enthusiasm for new music. He currently does so as composer-in-residence with Washington Musica Viva, and as a teacher through Baltimore City Public Schools. He also did so as a Visiting Artist in Composition at The University of Tulsa and creator of the composition program at Tulsa Community College. Faingold holds composition degrees from King's College London (PhD) and New York University (MM) as a Jack Kent Cooke Graduate Fellow, with additional fellowships through the Salzburg Global Seminar and the Bowdoin and Atlantic music festivals.

Brian Field

Brian Field began his musical endeavors at age eight with the study of piano, and began his first serious compositional efforts at sixteen. He earned his undergraduate degree in music and English literature from Connecticut College. At Connecticut, he studied composition with Noel Zahler.

Mr. Field continued his musical studies at the Juilliard School in New York City where he was awarded his Master of Music degree. At Juilliard he was a student of Milton Babbitt. From Juilliard, Mr. Field attended Columbia University, earning his Doctorate and studied composition with George Edwards and Mario Davidovsky.

Theresa Koon

Theresa Koon composes music primarily for the voice, emerging from an international performance career as a singer and actress. Operas, song cycles and choral music make up the center of her work, generally inspired by texts that explore psychological themes or current issues of social concern. When not composing, Theresa enjoys teaching Vocal Music Appreciation Classes for Friends of Chamber Music, and voice for PCC. She is the founding director of Opera for the Hesitant, dADa and other eclectic adventures. Mother of Exiles —her choral adaptation of the poem inscribed on the Statue of Liberty—was released on the Navona Records label in 2020. Lisa Neher

New music powerhouse Dr. Lisa Neher is an award-winning composer, mezzo-soprano, and actress on a mission to transform audiences through sound, story, and vulnerability. Described as a “visionary composer” (Willamette Week), “maestro of beautifully wacky noises” (Oregon ArtsWatch), and a composer of “varied and imitable” vocal lines (Contemporary Classical), Neher writes music inspired by female athleticism, the tender love of friends, the ambiguities of death, and the eerie mystery of deep ocean life. Her EP Of Wind and Waves explores the currents of air, water, and emotions that define our natural and psychological world. Neher’s commissioners include Third Angle New Music, Opera Elect, Opera Theatre Oregon, and Dinosaur Annex. She is the winner of the ICDA/ICF Choral Competition and the Mirror Visions Ensemble Young Composer Competition, and is a NATS Composer Mentee, working with Tom Cipullo.

Gary Lloyd Noland

Gary Lloyd Noland was born in Seattle in 1957 and grew up on a plot of land three blocks south of UC Berkeley known as People’s Park, which has distinguished itself as a site of civil unrest since the late 1960s. As an adolescent, Noland lived for a time in Salzburg and Garmisch-Partenkirchen (home of Richard Strauss), where he absorbed a host of musical influences. Having studied with a long roster of acclaimed composers and musicians, he earned a Bachelor's degree in Music from UC Berkeley in 1979, continued his studies at the Boston Conservatory (1981-83), and transferred to Harvard University, where he added to his academic credits a Masters and a PhD in Music Composition in 1989. His ever-expanding catalogue consists of hundreds of works, which include piano, vocal, chamber, orchestral, experimental, and electronic pieces, full-length plays in verse, chamber novels, and graphically notated scores such as his comic book opera Cafe Ritardando (Op. 89). His critically acclaimed, award-winning 77-hour long Gesamtkunstwerk JAGDLED: A Chamber Novel for Narrator, Musicians, Pantomimists, Dancers & Culinary Artists (Op. 20) was listed by one reviewer as the Number One Book of 2018.

Timothy Arliss O’Brien

Timothy Arliss O’Brien is an interdisciplinary artist in music composition and writing. He has premiered with The Astoria Music Festival, Cascadia Composers, and ENAensemble’s Serial Opera Project. He has published several books of poetry (The Art of Learning to Fly, Dear God I’m a Faggot, Happy LGBTQ Wrath Month), and has written for Look Up Records (Seattle), and Deep Overstock: The Bookseller’s Journal. He also hosts the podcast The Poet Heroic, and manages the digital space The Healers Covens.

He also showcases his psychedelic makeup skills as the phenomenal drag queen Tabitha Acidz. Check out more at: www.timothyarlissobrien.com

Paul V. Safar

Paul Safar is a versatile composer/performer and private piano instructor living and working in Eugene, Oregon. He has had commissions from ensembles such as the Delgani String Quartet. Paul’s compositions have been performed by concert pianist George Lopez among others. His music has been performed in cities from New York and Seattle to Havana and Fairbanks. Having a background in both classical and jazz/rock, one of Paul’s goals is to coherently combine these influences in his compositions. He also enjoys cross cultural musical collaborations such as with the Catalanian hurdy gurdy virtuoso, Marc Egea. Paul received his Bachelors degree from The Universtiy of Cincinnati (CCM) and also did graduate study at the University of Oregon under Robert Kyr. When not musicking, he may be seen hiking, backpacking, alpine skiing, traveling, enjoying a glass of pilsner or pinot or spending time with his family and friends. For more information visit www.paulsafar.com.

Drew Swatosh

Drew Swatosh (they/them) is a Vancouver, Washington-based composer, vocalist, and multi-instrumentalist. Inspired by their background in arts-integrated education, they write eclectic, programmatic music and use composing as a means of processing the world around them. Drew’s commissions include a trans/non-binary retelling of the myth of Icarus and Daedalus for the Seattle Opera Creation Lab; choral educator Stephanie Bivins; the Vancouver School of Arts and Academics Music Department; and vocalists Stephanie Lamprea, Marguerite McKean, and Carolyn Quick as part of the Dead Fires Anthology for Solo Unaccompanied/Self-Accompanied Voice. For more information, visit their website, www.drewswatosh.com.

Jennifer Wright

Jennifer Wright has been described as “a real force of nature” (FearNoMusic artistic director Kenji Bunch), "[One] of [Cascadia Composers’] most creative producer/composers" (Brett Campbell, Oregon ArtsWatch) and “brassy, nutty, classy…mad, quite mad” (Matthew Neil Andrews, Oregon ArtsWatch). She is a performer, composer, educator, multidisciplinary artist, event producer, and culture-maker. She holds two degrees in piano performance (M.M., Trinity College of Music, London, England; B.M., Hart School of Music, Connecticut) and studied for two years at the Music Conservatory in Stuttgart, Germany. She teaches piano at Reed College and in her private piano studio in Portland, Oregon.

Jennifer’s eclectic compositions include acoustic, electroacoustic, fixed media, and found-sound works for solo instruments, voice, mixed ensembles, choir, dance, experimental instruments, and film. Much of her work features alternative keyed instruments like typewriters, toy pianos, prepared piano, amplified harpsichords, and her deconstructed creations “The Skeleton Piano” and “Chimaera”. Jennifer’s compositions have been performed across the U.S., England, Finland and Cuba and on KGW TV and Cuban National TV by herself, FearNoMusic, Resonance Ensemble, Delgani Quartet, The Venerable Showers of Beauty Gamelan Orchestra, Ensemble Interactivo de la Habana, 20 Digitus Piano Duo, CORVUS, and Free Marz String Trio, among others. www.jenniferwrightpianostudio.com & www.skeletonpiano.com

Nicholas Yandell

Nicholas Yandell is a Portland, Oregon-based composer, musician, writer & visual artist. Musically, he dwells in numerous sound worlds, and whether he’s writing classical concert works, psychedelic emo synth pop, building electronic works with found sounds from the Portland streets, or something entirely different, he often seeks to blur the line between the visual, verbal, and musical realms. He has composed or collaborated on a number of scores for short films and film projects and has had works performed by such artists as the Pyxis Quartet (with Oregon Symphony percussionist Sergio Carreno), the Delgani String Quartet, and Oregon Symphony cellist Marilyn De Oliveira. He holds a Masters of Music Composition and a Bachelor of Music from Five Towns College in Dix Hills, NY, and has been named the 2020 Composer of the Year by the Oregon Music Teachers Association. His creative aim is to capture the joys, challenges, and anxieties of 21st century life in art that you feel, that makes you think, and something you’ll enjoy too. You can check out his creations at www.nicholasyandell.com and thanks for listening!
